Description

Ethics in management became popular and important concept lately. Different companies might have different ethical standards, but management ethics is almost the same in every industry. Students will learn that corruption is the abuse of power to achieve illegitimate personal gain. Bribery and corruption are extreme forms of unethical behavior. Wherever they do business around the world, managers must not only avoid breaking the law, they should follow high ethical standards. Ethics and appropriate behavior transcend all business activities and figure prominently in management decisions about financial performance and competitive advantage. An integrated, strategic approach to ethical, sustainable, and socially responsible behavior provides firms with competitive advantages, including stronger relationships with customers, employees, shareholders, suppliers, and the communities where they do business.

Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to: Define ethics Understand what is meant under 'ethical dilemma' Identify stakeholders that could be affected by managerial decisions in various situations Analyze a situation that requires a manager to make an ethical decision from various ethical perspectives (moral views/ schools of thought) Evaluate short-term and long-term effects of various decisions on reputation (individual, corporate) and morale (e.g. employees)
